Who Is Without Sin? Loving the Sinner!

Dear People of God, on this Fifth Sunday of Lent (Year C), we celebrate our Lord who wipes out our past sins. The completeness of His forgiveness is almost incredible. When He says to us “Neither do I condemn you”, the past is indeed dead, snuffed out like a wick, forgotten. Laughter and song fill our hearts and it seems like a dream. To the exiles in Babylonia, Isaiah foretells a new Exodus, when the Lord will lead His people from captivity to freedom. True freedom is rooted in the Person of Jesus, not in observance of the Law. It is He who challenges us to examine our hearts before self-righteously judging others. The mercy of God is a direct reflection of His love for us. Between a blind application of the Law of Moses and the saving of a human life, Jesus chooses to save life. He shows that the purpose of any law is really to promote life.

“Behold, I am doing a new thing” as posited in the first reading, is realised in the Person of Jesus. This passage, from the section of Isaiah known as the Book of Consolation, was written to encourage the people of Israel during their exile in Babylon. With imagery that harkens back to the story of the Exodus from Egypt, as well as the creation story, the author exhorts his fellow Jews to trust that God will continue to come to their aid, rescue them, and forgive their transgressions. They are to be mindful of the history of God’s kindness, not to dwell on their past sins. Rather, they are to anticipate the “new things” that God is about to do on their behalf. Amid their shame and guilt, in the face of their doubts over whether or not Yahweh had given up on them, the oracle asserts that they are still “my chosen people, the people whom I formed for myself”. God will make a new way in the wilderness, new springs of water for the desert for the thirsty. Where there is no hope and life, God brings freshness, life, and salvation. God was not only in their past but also in their future. We all, like the people of Israel, should therefore sing out loud with the Psalmist that “the Lord has done great things for us: we are filled with joy”.

Like St Paul in the second reading, having heeded the message proclaimed to him, he describes himself as “forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead” which is exactly what the passage from Isaiah urged the ancient Israelites to do. So decisive has been Paul’s experience of forgiveness in Jesus Christ that he looks upon his entire previous life as so much “rubbish/refuse” when compared to “the righteousness from God” that he has found “through faith in Christ”. Paul is eager to know Christ and the power of His resurrection, to share in His sufferings, and to become like Him in His death, so that he may also attain the resurrection from the dead. Though Paul makes it clear that he knows he has not “arrived” at perfection, he presses on to the goal, for the prize of the “heavenly call of God in Christ Jesus”. Paul, a Pharisee, a strict observer of the Law, who thought salvation could be earned by following the traditions of the elders, breaks away with his past and gives up his old ways of thinking that were so firmly rooted in his heart. Touched by grace, Paul encourages us to let the past be past, and the future be the future.

In the Gospel, we are given a story that illustrates in a moving fashion the divine love that unconditionally forgives our past sins, freeing us to lead a new life of grace. The Scribes and the Pharisees, who bring the adulterous woman to Jesus, personify the harsh judgment of the Law. They made a considerable effort to catch this woman in the “act of adultery”, making her stand in front of everybody in the public area, and hoping to discredit Jesus. Per Moses’ Law, she should be stoned to death for her sin. St John further ascribes to them duplicitous motives underlying their self-righteous behaviour. The response of Jesus is brilliant. He refuses to condemn to death this woman. Without condoning her sin, Jesus reveals the hypocrisy of her accusers and at the same time restores to her a sense of self-worth. Jesus admonishes this trembling woman, abandoned by her lover, guilty, ashamed but repentant, to go and sin no more. He chose to save a life instead of a blind application of the Law. With Jesus’ pardon, she is given a future, restored to dignity, healed and made whole again. This is suggestive of the “born-again” life of the believer who has found in the Baptismal Waters a whole new way of living. She leaves her encounter with Jesus reconciled to God, her community, and herself.

In Jesus, every sinner has a future and every saint has a past. In His mercy, He aids a sinner to press forward in hope and a saint to let go of her/his past in trust. Jesus comes to save us and He does that with the weapon of mercy. In His mercy, as seen in the Gospel, He reaches out to both the woman caught in adultery and those desiring to condemn her. “Let the one without sin cast the first stone” teaches us about compassion, reminding us that we are all imperfect. Like the woman, we all need grace and mercy. Jesus did not condemn her, He forgave her and urged her to change. This shows God’s boundless love, urging us to repent and start anew. From this encounter, we also learn to forgive and seek redemption. Let us always remember that no matter how our past has been, Jesus offers forgiveness and a chance to transform our lives. We are all in need of His mercy and should extend it to others. Mercy is the true remedy for sin, not condemnation. Jesus wants us to treat others with mercy. Condemnation does not give the other a chance for conversion. Mercy speaks to the heart of the sinner, calling her/him to repentance. Lord, teach us to be merciful!

Dear Students, we encourage you to make the Chaplaincy environment an essential part of your life as you stay on Campus and its environs. Make the best out of your programme of study: it will surely lead you to your glorious destiny. Let us intensify our preparations for the examinations. Be of good conduct throughout the exams. God will surely crown your efforts with success. With faith, we say, God, lead the way! Know that, no matter what your past has been, you can always begin anew. God does not condemn us but shows mercy and He forgives. Every sinner has a future and every saint has a past because the mercy of God is a true reflection of His love for us. May our Lenten observances reconcile us to God and restore us. Please, do take good care of yourselves! God richly bless you. Pax!

Please remember to stay well, healthy, and safe. Do not be afraid to attend Mass. Observe the safety protocols. Your life is dear to us.

Have a Blessed and Fruitful Week.

God bless and keep you safe.

Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, Pray for Us.
